

Dear AHME Community:

We join others throughout the world in our commitment to raise awareness about the importance of diversity and inclusion in medicine, equity in healthcare and medical education, and in the impact of those we serve—our patients and the communities they live in, our graduate and undergraduate medical education community inclusive of hospitals, program and institutional leaders and administrators, and our learners. This year has brought upon us significant suffering from the loss of human life. As we face these challenges as a nation, we hope that our AHME membership will continue to stand together to optimize our clinical learning environments and the communities we live in. More than ever it is important for our AHME membership to work together, share ideas, and concerns as new opportunities arise. The AHME leadership will meet in July as we plan for the next Institute but we remain present and by your side throughout the year. Let us not forget that the greatest strength of AHME is its diversity.

Sincerely,

Wilhelmine Wiese-Rometsch, MD, FACP, AHME President-Elect
Susan Greenwood-Clark, MBA, RN, FACHE, AHME President
Frederick Schiavone, MD, FACEP, Immediate Past President

Association for Hospital Medical Education

Improving Health Care through Medical Education

Visit us at www.AHME.org