

Continuing Medical Education: Current Status and Future Directions

Tuesday, June 9, 2015
1:00-2:00 p.m. ET

The ACCME's Mission outlines seven primary responsibilities and the organization has been successfully addressing each of these elements since its inception. The appointment of a new President and CEO of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education is an opportune time to gauge where the discipline of continuing medical education currently stands and to gain some insight into what the future may hold for the medical education community. Please join the incoming ACCME President and CEO to hear his thoughts on these topics and more.

Objectives:

This teleconference will provide participants the opportunity to:

- Engage with Dr. McMahon and hear his perspectives on the opportunities the future holds for the ACCME and the national CME enterprise;
- Develop strategies for utilizing accredited CME as a strategic asset within their institutions to promote practice-based change and improvement in support of better care;
- Integrate national priorities (e.g., addressing public health imperatives, interprofessional education) into their own professional practice as institutional leaders and members of the education community; and
- Identify strategies to enhance engagement and support of institutional, state-based and national stakeholders involved with professional requirements for physicians, such as licensure and certification.

Speaker:

Beginning in April 2015, Graham T. McMahon, MD, MMSc, will be the President and Chief Executive Officer of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME®). Dr. McMahon leads efforts to strengthen the role of accredited CME as a strategic resource to public health initiatives on the national and international level. He is responsible for positioning accredited CME to effectively meet the needs of emerging generations of healthcare professionals.
