Promoting Change in the GME Clinical Learning Environment

Tuesday, January 9, 2024 ~ 1:00-2:00 p.m. Eastern

Change in the GME Clinical Learning Environment can take many forms. Are you starting new programs? Are you new or have new leadership? Have you recently converted non-accredited programs to non-standard training programs (NST)? This session will discuss internal and external factors influencing GME and how to use Kotter's change theory to effectively lead that change. You will gain skills and be provided with resources to help you through changes in your environment.

Objectives:

At the conclusion of the session, learners should be able to:

- Understand the external and internal factors that influence change in GME;
- Learn to effectively use Kotter's change theory to lead change; and,
- Become equipped with skills and resources for practical application.

Speakers:

Erin Reis, EdD, MBA, FACHE, C-TAGME has served in Graduate Medical Education and hospital leadership for over ten years, working with new and established residency programs to create alignment between education, community needs, and organizational goals. She currently works at McLaren Health Care and has successfully partnered with programs and hospitals for programmatic growth and resident success.

Lori Smith, EdD, MBA, MSL has over 30 years of GME experience. She has worked at a large health system with 90+ programs, helped an osteopathic hospital attain ACGME accreditation and is now working at Bayhealth Medical Center creating a new clinical learning environment in a medically underserved area.

Moderator:

John Ballentine, MBA is the Executive Director for Academics Finance Administration at Prisma Health and is a member of AHME's Council of Institutional Leaders (COIL).
