

Individual Learning Plans for Today's Resident: Creation, Implementation & Connection to Milestones
Tuesday, August 8, 2023 ~ 1:00-2:00 p.m. Eastern

Individual learning plans for residents are an integral – but still somewhat mysterious – aspect in supporting resident and fellow learning and development. They have been part of a program's responsibility for years now, but faculty, Program Directors, Program Administrators, and education specialists may still have questions on how to best construct these tools and guide their learners. How can the specialty specific Milestones aid in this process? With increased personalization in GME, how can we use ILPs to foster career development from residency into practice? The session will share concepts of ILPs, one program's use of ILPs, and how to leverage the Milestones as a resource for ILP development.

Objectives:

At the conclusion of the session, learners should be able to:

- Describe the purpose and elements of a robust ILP;
- Explore integration of ILPs at an institutional level; and,
- Link Milestones and other resources to guide ILP development.

Speaker:

Brijen Shah, MD, AGAF is an Associate Dean for GME for the Mount Sinai Health System, and an Associate Program Director for the GI Fellowship. He oversees health systems science education for GME, the clinical learning environment, professionalism and provider performance within medical affairs, and supports faculty in various capacities, including remediation and learning development. As an educator, Dr. Shah has been involved in national working groups including ACGME's Milestones 2.0 for GI and their newest tool, the Clinician Educator Milestones. Dr. Shah leads QI, patient safety, and leadership courses across the educational spectrum at Icahn and nationally.

Moderator:

Renee H. Connolly, PhD is the Director of Learning and Development for GME at Prisma Health in South Carolina and Clinical Assistant Professor in the University of South Carolina Columbia School of Medicine's Department of Neuropsychiatry & Behavioral Science. She is the current Chair of AHME's Council on Professional and Faculty Development (CPFDD).
